There comes a time when clinicians must face the age-old dilemma, "Why have I not started a private practice?" "And why am I not doing more to promote my practice?" After all, you are an experienced, trained and highly qualified clinician, ready to make a much needed contribution to the mental health profession and to a client population eager for your services!

This workshop will address the anxieties, fears and rationalizations which prevent clinicians from moving forward and becoming more successful in their private practices. Our panel of highly trained, successful, private practice clinicians will address these issues from their own unique vantage points. They will discuss the essentials necessary for the beginner, and options for more seasoned clinicians, such as:

- Licensing, certifications, insurance, office space, managing managed care.
- How to develop specialties; publicizing your practice; creating private fee patients.
- Taking advantage of modern technology; networking; corporate presentations; writing newspaper articles; publishing papers.

Workshop registrants are encouraged to come prepared to discuss your private practice goals.

Rosalie Fine, LMSW; Training Institute graduate with a Certificate in Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy; has masters from Fordham University; post master's certificate from NYU; a private practice in NYC and is a certified therapist in EMDR, and a member of EMDRIA.

Hillary Volper, LCSW, is on the faculty of TI as an instructor, training analyst and supervisor. She is the President of TI's Associates Program, which offers educational presentations to the community on mental health issues. Ms. Volper has been in private practice for over 25 years providing psychotherapy for individuals, couples and groups, and has conducted workshops on developing a private practice.

Ruth Washton, LCSW, graduate of NYU, has a Certificate in Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy from TI. She is in private practice in NYC and is on the staff of a non-profit social services agency, providing vocational counseling to young adults with learning disabilities and Asperger's Disorder. Through her activities with the NY State Society of Clinical Social Workers, she has been educating clinicians about NY State's new mental health provision, "Timothy's Law."
